Prison, and four or five others to pay a fine of ten dollars each, and give security in $250 for their future good behaviour.

About three weeks after the riot another meeting was held in the Park, at which about eight thousand persons were present. Its object was to adopt some measures for the prevention of monopoly; but as it was of a party character, and organized for the benefit of some politicians, it did not effect any good.

Strike of the Draymen at Louisville.

[From the Louisville Courier, March 11.]

Yesterday the draymen of this city turned out in full force, on parade, or rather a strike for rates of drayage. They paraded on the plain at the lower end of the city, and then proceeded through the streets in single file. They went up Main street to Fifth, down Fifth to the river, up Fourth to Main, in Main to Clay, out to Jefferson, and then down extended from Brook street, up Main to Clay, out Clay to Jefferson, down Jefferson to Sixth. While tha head of it was at Sixth, the end was just passing Brook street. The number in the procession consisted of 129 drays, with white drivers, and 130 with colored drivers, in all 259 drays. They were all two horse drays except about twanty. The leader of the colored draymen was Old Buckner, who has been seventeen years on the line. Several of the drays had odd wheels on them, which were taken from drays whose owners refused to join the parade. A drayman on Sixth street was assaulted by one of the men in the procession for refusing to join in, on resisting those who were taking his wheel off. He was assisted by young Mr. Curd, the owner of the dray, when some one knocked him down. With this exception the parade passed off peacefully. he parade passed off peacefully.
